Description

Title Antique Persian
The Baktiari area (Chahar Mahal), in central Persia near Isfahan, produces both village and nomadic rugs with bright colors, allover lattice patterns and sturdy constructions. Antique rugs have been woven there since the 19th century. Originally the patterns were adapted from classical Persian carpets, but rapidly evolved into a truly unique style of rustic carpets. Square room sizes are popular and rugs up to 30 feet long are woven. The best qualities were made for the Baktiari tribal leaders or khans. The wool is excellent and derives from local tribal sheep, resilient and elastic. The colors are vibrant and saturated.
